Quote : “At the end of the eighteenth century most evangelicals adopted postmillennialism, the belief forcefully expounded by Jonathan Edwards, that the Holy Spirit would be poured out so copiously in revival plenitude that the church would enjoy a millennium of extraordinary prosperity before the return of Christ . . .this belief helps explain the reformist and missionary (and unprecedented global expansion) energy of evangelicals (at the time)” Stuart Piggin. Quoted from his near 700 page book on the source of Australia's prosperity. He will be speaking in Adelaide early April
